The aim of the present study was to examine the validity of a previously described method to estimate daily energy expenditure in adolescents, using a high-resolution acceleration measurement device. A high-resolution accelerometer was worn by 20 adolescents during 3 consecutive days, in combination with an actigraph. This device was specifically designed to allow the measurement of minute-by-minute physical activity of individuals. The percentage of time spent in moderate-to-vigorous physical activity (MVPA), the number of MVPA bouts and their duration, as well as energy expenditure, were estimated by the newly developed algorithm. 82157476af
